VARIANT LIBRARY

Xiangqi (, “Elephant Chess”) is one of the world’s most played strategy board games, tracing its origins to China no later than the 7th century. Played on the intersection points of a 9×10 grid, it features a river dividing the board, a palace restricting the General and Advisors, and the Cannon: a piece that can only capture by jumping over exactly one other piece.

This library includes 2 playable variants spanning the Chinese and Korean branches of the family.

CHINESE CHESS

- ♦ Standard Xiangqi — The classic form: 9×10 board, river divide, Flying General rule, and the screen-jumping Cannon
- ♦ Janggi — Korean Chess: no river, a longer Elephant movement, Cannon restricted from jumping other Cannons, and the bikjang facing-Generals rule
